FRÖHN
ZELLENBERG

Situated on a knoll of calcareous sandstone, Zellenberg, a small winegrowing town to the east of Riquewihr, dominates a fine vineyard. Facing south-south-east, the 14,60 ha Frœhn lines the steep hillside at 270 to 300 metres of altitude.

It is a marl-clay soil, made of dark grey schistous marl, showing some small white calcareous layers and also some carbonated and iron rich nodules.

The Frœhn favours the cultivation of Gewurztraminer, Tokay Pinot Gris and Muscat.

In his work of reference, Médard Barth cites the Frœhn as one of the finest vineyards of the period.

Frœhn wines are noted for their fruitiness and full flavour. Their richness confers excellent ageing potential.
